

Immaterial girl

A. N. WILSON'S article on Madonna made me wonder if he has ever met a proper cross-section of English young people. When he writes that teenage girls like to imitate Madonna, does he believe that we all want to become like her? If so, he is sorely mistaken.

Madonna is a bad influence to young teenagers in this country; she should be banned from selling records like Papa Don't Preach. I have not bought any of her records or tapes, nor do I buy any of her 'sexy underwear'.
